

Mark Hull

M.A.Hull@leeds.ac.uk

Professor Mark Hull trained in Biochemistry at the University of Cambridge and in Clinical Medicine at the University of Oxford. He completed postgraduate studies leading to the PhD degree at the University of Nottingham. He is now an Academic Gastroenterologist at the University of Leeds and Leeds Teaching Hospitals Trust, with research interests that include chemoprevention of colorectal cancer and mechanisms of obesity-related colorectal carcinogenesis. He has a particular interest in the role of omega-3 fatty acids for prevention of colorectal cancer.

He is Chief Investigator of the seAFood Polyp Prevention Trial (ISRCTN05926847). His work is funded by the National Institute for Health Research, Cancer Research UK, World Cancer Research Fund and Yorkshire Cancer Research.